Gyan Bharati School's Primary department recently held their Book Week event, called "BOOKYLICIOUS: Feeding your brain with delicious thoughts." The event took place from April 10 to April 17 in the school's inner auditorium during regular school hours.

The event featured a number of exciting activities, including a Reader's Oath, Roll a Story game, and spotlight on Author of the Week, Julia Donaldson. In addition, students were introduced to various libraries and book shops in Delhi, and were invited to spend time in the Reading Nook.

One of the event's star features was Story under a Tree, which showcased storytelling using puppets, shadow puppetry, drama, and music. Other highlights included storytelling through Pattachitra in Bengali for "Macher Biye," Nritya Katha, Geet Katha, and On the Same Page Baithak discussions led by both teachers and students.

On April 15, a book fair was held for classes 1 to 5, featuring Eureka bookstore and Pratham books as participants. The event ended on April 17 with more exciting activities, such as Nritya Katha, Geet Katha, and storytelling using puppets by HT City, followed by a puppet-making workshop.

Overall, Book Week at Gyan Bharati School was a great success, providing students with a wide range of activities to encourage their love of reading and storytelling.
