We're excited to share that our primary school experienced an overwhelming response to the book collection drive, amassing over 1000 storybooks. This initiative, born from the idea of instilling a love for reading in our children and encouraging them to share that joy with others, unfolded over a week. The culmination on the exhibition day saw our little story elves passionately urging everyone to become a part of this beautiful program.

Over the last two days, our children not only contributed to 'Books for All' and the Uday Foundation but also went beyond. The heart behind this act was to foster a culture of reading, emphasizing the transformative power of books. Both organizations appreciated not just the quantity but the profound intent behind our children's actions, applauding the altruism demonstrated. Kudos to our children and their parents for embodying the spirit of sharing the joy of reading with the community!"
